

What's That Lurking In The Water?

Emily Peasgood

What's that lurking in the water?
A scary creature waiting for ya!
It's got red eyes and loads of toes,
And where it comes from nobody knows.

What's that lurking in the water?
A hungry creature waiting for ya!
With three green tongues and eighteen legs,
It eats small kids with seagull eggs!

But even if he's got ten googly eyes,
He might actually be quite nice,
He might want some apple pie,
He might be a lovely guy.
Ah!

What's that lurking in the water?
A slimy creature waiting for ya!
It's got grey skin, a blue head fin,
And I don't know where it has been.

What's that lurking in the water?
A noisy creature waiting for ya!
With wings like webs, it slinks along
And poops a lot while singing a song!

But even if she's got two faces for feet,
she might actually be quite sweet,
She might not want kids to eat,
But prefer a tasty badger.

Bridge

If you've got fifty spikes
And your skin's bright blue,
You might be awesome all the way through.
When your face is pink
And your tail trails long
That doesn't mean your homework's always wrong.

What's that lurking in the water?
A friendly creature waiting for ya!
She's made of rocks, a cheesy smile, Oh!
It's the amiable rock-o-dile!

Wah, wah, wah, wah, wah, wah, wah, wah

What's that lurking in the water?
A friendly creature waiting for ya!
He's got ten legs and wears a crown
And makes loud thunder when he's upside down!

Part 1

When you've got three heads
And one's bright yella'
You could be a sunny fella!
If you've got eight hands
And only three gloves
Then you might need a lot of love
